Knowing how to “ask yourself questions” means finding the right questions to ask in any situation, and on any subject.

What is “informative questioning”?

It means asking yourself the right questions, the useful questions, in a given situation, to sol.

Knowing how to ask the right questions is a way of giving yourself all the possible means to achieve what you want.

Here is an example:

I want to be a woodcutter. I am going to ask myself questions to find out how I can do it:

- Where can I find information about the job?
- Could I do this job in another European country?
- Do I have the physical requirements? For example, am I strong enough to do it?
- What training do I need for the job?
- Would I have to pay for the training?

You have found the questions. The “questionnaire” is ready. It is “informative” in that the answers given will inform me about being a woodcutter.
You have found this advertisement in a newspaper.

You would like more information. You decide to telephone and find out. But before that…

Write down at least 5 questions to ask so that you do not forget anything important when you telephone.

Here are a few questions that you could prepare before phoning (there are of course a lot more):

- What kind of jobs might be available if I complete the course?
- What do you mean by “health issues”?
- What qualifications do I need to apply for the course?
- How can I enrol for one of the meetings?
- What time do the meetings start?
- How long do they last?
- Will there be any other meetings?
- How long does the course last?
- What qualification will I have at the end of it?
- How can I continue to earn while doing the course?
You have read several advertisements from companies recruiting telesales operators (sales people who sell products over the phone), part time or full time, in your area.

These advertisements specify that you have to speak clearly and like being in contact with customers.

You want to find out more information about this kind of work from someone who has already done it. Before phoning, write down the questions that you think are necessary.

Questions:
Here are a few questions that you could prepare before phoning
(there are of course a lot more):

- How much is the job paid?
- Can you work at home using your own telephone?
- Do you have to have a specific school level?
- Is it stressful work?
- Do you have a list of customers or do you have to find which customers to phone?
- Do you have to call a certain number of customers a day?
- Are the people you call sometimes unpleasant to deal with?
- Do you have to sell a certain number of products a day?
- Do you get commission on the products you sell?
- Is the work tiring?
- Can you choose the hours you work?

Etc.

The company you work for is going to move to a town about 15 km away. This company sells office furniture, with a showroom of about 5000 m². You have been asked to find a competitively-priced removal firm to do the move the following Sunday. You have chosen this advertisement:

Low priced removals
24/7. Tel. 01334 182 497

Write down at least 5 questions to ask in order to remember all the information you need when you phone.

Questions:
Here are a few questions that you could prepare before phoning (there are of course a lot more):

- Does the removal firm work on Sundays?
- Can it do the move next Sunday?
- What would the rates be to move 5000 m² of office furniture to a town 15 km away?
- What sort of protection do they provide so as to avoid damaging the furniture?
- How long would the move take?
- When can I have a definite answer?
