Look at these two pictures.

1. What can we see?

2. How can we interpret what we see?

1. We can see that:

- There is a car near a pedestrian crossing.
- A small boy is crossing a road. The signal tells him he can cross.
- The car knocks the boy down.
- The boy is thrown into the air by the blow.

2. My interpretation of this:

- There has been an accident.
- A young boy has been injured.
- A driver ignored the signal.
- A driver is in the wrong.

We don’t know everything about this situation. For example, about the driver, perhaps:

- the driver didn’t see the signal
- the driver has a problem with his brakes
- the driver had a heart attack
- etc.

There is often a difference between:
- what we really see
- what we interpret

Drawing by de Angelique Meyer, apprentice metalworker, 19 years old

How do you interpret the picture?

Write your ideas about the different parts of the illustration.

If you act without thinking, you do not succeed.

Two donkeys were joined together by a rope. One of them saw a pile of hay to the left. The other one saw a pile of hay to the right.

Each donkey wanted its hay. But the rope is too short. The two donkeys are stubborn. They each pull to their own side. By doing this, they do not manage to reach the hay.

Finally they speak to each other. They are no longer obstinate. They talk to try to find a solution.

They make a plan. First, they go to the right together, and eat. Then, they eat the hay on the left. Each one got what he wanted. They both worked in partnership. That’s what we call working as a team.

Lewis comes into the hairdresser’s.
The hairdresser is pleased to see him. She greets Lewis politely. She shakes his hand.

Then, she helps Lewis take off his jacket.

Then the hairdresser asks Lewis to sit down in a chair.
Lewis would like to change the colour of his hair.

The hairdresser shows him what colours are available.
She gives him some advice. She suggests colours that would suit him. She also offers to colour just the ends of his hair. That would bring out the curl on his forehead.

| Paulo has an appointment at the hairdresser’s. | Paulo watches how the hairdresser cuts his hair. |
| He knows the salon well. The equipment is modern. | He doesn’t need the gown anymore. |
| First, the hairdresser puts a gown on him. Then, she washes his hair with shampoo. |

| The work is finished. | Now Paulo is going to pay. |
| The hairdresser shows him his new hairstyle in the mirror. He can see himself from the back. | He smiles at the hairdresser. He will be happy to come here again. |
| He is very satisfied. | He will recommend the salon to his friends. |

Waiter, there’s a hair in my soup!” Everyone knows a joke about this. But if you think about it, it’s not really funny. No one wants to find one. When you work in the kitchen, you must always wear a chef’s hat. It prevents hair from falling into the food. Hair in food is not very hygienic!

It’s very important to have a good lifting technique.

In a restaurant, you sometimes have to lift very heavy pots. (And if there’s any hair in there, it’s even heavier!!!) There is a technique to save your back. First you have to bend your knees and crouch down. Then you can lift the pot. This way you use your legs as well as your back. On the right, the man is only using his back. This is also useful for lifting other heavy weights.

There is a specific technique for cutting. One hand cuts while the other holds the onion. You could cut yourself badly. Your fingers should not be flat when holding the food.

Grilling meat or grilling your fingers? The oven tray is very hot. To pull it out, you have to protect your hands. You can use a cloth or an oven glove. Have you noticed? Cooks always have a cloth over their shoulder.

What are you like in the mornings?

The alarm goes off.

I jump out of bed!

A good shower to get really clean.

A big bowl of cereal for breakfast.

I feel so good this morning!

I feel ready for anything.

How does your day begin?

Which illustrations are most like you in the morning?

The alarm goes off.

What? Already?!

I don't feel like washing.

Deodorant will do the trick.

Breakfast?

Sorry, no time!

Quick!

The teacher will be furious!

I'm late again!

I'm exhausted! It's lucky we're sitting down!
