Disc Jockey

Ben: So if I get what you're saying, Sir, your daughter, who is always changing her mind about what she wants to do later on, now wants to be a disk jockey... And you don't think it's a "proper job"... But I disagree, Sir, it is a real job! Even if there are no official qualifications to do the job! I don't just work in discotheques; I do all sorts of events, both public and private! What sort? Concerts at the sports stadium, festivals, weddings... I'm also in regular contact with agencies specialising in the organisation of events or parties.

... Oh no, the equipment you see here isn't mine. But I do own all those boxes of CDs and LPs over there. As you can see, I've got a considerable number of them and I have to buy new ones regularly. Sure, it's a huge investment at first. What did you say? No Sir, I'm not paid just to put on records and get people to dance! It's much more complicated than that! I'm a professional technician, competent with the equipment, mixing and also skilled at performing, would you believe! I create atmosphere, I make the right links between the records, I try to create my own style and I have made quite a success of it! Entertaining, making sure people enjoy themselves, all that is important, Sir! And it's a genuine occupation!

In a similar line of work, Ben could also have been: interpreter – composer – conductor – musician – record dealer – music publisher – sound engineer – music therapist – instrument maker – instrument teacher – specialised salesman in a music shop – sound technician – specialised journalist – music teacher...
