Ex dancer

Maggie: Why am I no longer a dancer, Paul ? Ah yes, I really regret that! Dancing was my passion! I began classes when I was six. I was very gifted. I got into the Conservatory when I was still at school. School in the mornings and dance in the afternoons. Even for contemporary dance or dance required for variety shows, you have to start with classical training, exercises at the bar, a lot of incredible effort, great endurance, discipline every day... like a world class sportsman.

And then there are the auditions with the hope of one day belonging to a dance company. If not, you move from contract to contract if you're lucky enough to get them. Tours, shows ending at midnight and then rehearsals starting at 10 the next morning. And then, one evening, all that ended for me. An unfortunate accident. A broken ankle. And then I met you, Paul. But I am not very proud of what I do now...
